HONOURING OUR LEADERS

By Rabbi Ferdinand M. Isserman

Canadian Jews have learned to honour those who serve them. For eulogies and funeral wreaths we have substituted appreciation and gratitude in this life. Lyon Cohen, Leo Frankel, Sam Kronick, Charles Draimin have been thus honoured in the past few years. Recently the Canadian Zionists arranged a banquet to Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Freiman, of Ottawa, these two outstanding Canadian Jewish leaders. Thus Moses Gelber was honoured by his friends in Toronto last week, and thus Edmund Scheuer will be honoured when the new home of Federation, to be known as Scheuer House and the gift of his friends to the community, will be dedicated on Chanukah.

"FOREIGNERS HAVE BECOME GREAT CANADIANS"

We are happy to quote the defense of the foreigners who have settled in Canada, made by the Honorable R. B. Bennett at the closing session of the annual convention of the Liberal-Conservative Association held in Toronto last week. After the usual denunciation of the non-British immigrant had been indulged in, the leader of the Conservative party, by the words which follow, administered a rebuke to the fanatics who have been baiting the foreigner, saying:

"Sometimes we are prone not to get the perspective we should with respect to our country as a whole. It is a country to which various parties have invited men from various countries. Men have come into Western Canada, settled there and become great Canadians, become legislators and members of Parliament, and played a large part in settlement and development of the fertile plains of the West. We must not forget that Great Britain itself represents many races, and is a fusion of the blood of many peoples. So in Western Canada and other parts of Canada we have men and women who have come from every section of the globe. They have assimilated to our institutions and become great Canadians, and the purpose of this party is to create great Canadians, if possible, men and women who will have a high conception of their obligations, and high appreciation of the great ideals of Canada, and in course of time, by reason of what we see of our country, and the part we play in the British Commonwealth of Nations, become true lovers of the British Empire.

"I feel it desirable that one should make that observation, because sometimes we who live in the eastern part of the country have not just that appreciation of what is going on in other sections of it, nor of the great mingling of forces that is bringing about the development of the true spirit of Canadianism in every part of this vast Dominion."

A local paper, commenting editorially on this fair stand of the Hon. R. B. Bennett, said that he was appealing for the foreign vote. We do not know whether Mr. Bennett gained or lost votes by his expression of appreciation of what the foreigner has done for Canada.

THE CHORUS OF HALELUJAHS

The Jewish Bulletin canvassed the American rabbinate for opinions on the recent Agency conference. The answers conveyed the impression that the spiritual guides of the Israelitish flock are almost unanimous in their approval of the Agency proposition. The interesting feature of the rabbinical messages is the grandiloquent and bombastic tone and the extravagant language which they all used in uttering their opinions. "One of the most momentous events in Jewish history," "Israel is now a united people," "history was made," "the most important event since the Balfour Declaration," "henceforth there will be peace in Israel"—these were a few of the milder pronouncements. We have not before us the copies of the Bulletins with the actual replies, but we can assure our readers that the statements which we have reproduced, are rather the moderate ones. Our imagination simply will not serve us in trying to reconstruct the more lavish dicta.

How glorious it is for mortals in Savannah, Georgia, and Topeka, Kansas, and Dayton, Ohio, and other such points of vantage to lift themselves by dint of rabbinical pinions to supermundane heights, and from there survey the stretches of Jewish history, and peer into the future and spout oracular judgments about current happenings that take place, in a New York hotel!

We wonder why the Bulletin omitted to ask Dr. Stephen Wise for his opinion on the subject. We daresay that his reply might have contributed a slight discord in the chorus of rabbinical halelujahs.

THE "LITWACK VERBAND"

We offer our friend Henry Hurwitz congratulations on his re-election to the presidency of the "Litwack Verband" at the recent conference of that body.

If Mr. Hurwitz will bring to his new task the same qualities of character which he has displayed in his conduction of the Menorah affairs, then we may expect the organization to evolve into something worth while. Mr. Hurwitz is an intellectual. He will find no shortage of intellectuals among the Litwacks to co-operate with him. Who knows but that some day we may hear of Litwack dinners being held that will rival the Menorah dinners in the excellence of their intellectual pabulum? And are we to look forward to a Litwack Journal along the lines of the excellent Menorah Journal? One thing in favour of the new organization as compared with Mr. Hurwitz's Menorah is that there will be no body of undergraduates to deal with. The Menorah might have been a really successful venture were it not that it had to bother with the students—for how can an organization achieve a decent cultural plane if it has to cater to university registrants?

COMPLETING THE CIRCLE

In describing a circle it takes the last dot to complete the figure. Without it there is a gap which prevents the lineament from being what it is meant to be.

The "FAME" Virgin Milk
(Genuine Sirroy-Gaitier Formula)
Will permanently whiten and beautify the skin
This beneficial skin tonic does a rare thing—it whitens the skin naturally. Other skin whiteners leave a coat of white powder on the skin, but this amazingly satisfactory milk whitens the skin itself, giving it a satiny finish. If you would have your skin appear at its best this winter, try it at once.

Federation Asks $260,000 for Charity

Canvassers for the Federation of Jewish Philanthropies started Monday on a campaign to raise $260,000 to provide for the budget of the organization for the coming year. Sunday, November 25, the workers in the campaign gathered in the Mount Royal Hotel to hear addresses by their leaders and by Dr. Solomon Lowenstein, executive director of the Federation of New York Philanthropies.

This year the Federation will seek $10,000 more than it asked from subscribers last year. As campaign slogan the consolidation of local Jewish charities has chosen, "Give to the utmost of your ability—even a little more than you can afford." The budget as estimated for 1929 is in part as follows: Family Welfare Department, $109,125; Mount Sinai Sanatorium, $44,000; Montreal Hebrew Orphans' Home, $39,000; Montreal Hebrew Old People's and Sheltering Home, $14,000; Herzl Dispensary, $11,000, and varying sums for ten other communal activities.

Ben Yaphe
Boots and Shoes Division of the Business Men's Council.

Speakers emphasized the fact that the increase in the budget of the Federation for this year represented the rise in the number of families cared for by the Family Welfare Department, and on the larger number of inmates in the new Old People's Home. The natural general increase and improvement of standards also accounts for the growth in the budget figures. 5,660 individuals are on the lists of the Family Welfare Department, while the Herzl Dispensary benefits 14,011 people. The Mount Sinai Sanatorium treats 145 patients during the year; the Hebrew Orphans' Home houses 110 children; the Legal Aid Department helps 1,930; the Young Women's Hebrew Association reaches 1,480, and the Neighborhood Settlement House provides recreational activities for 1,200.

Dr. Lowenstein, of New York City, whose organization is at present engaged in a campaign to raise between $9,000,000 and $10,000,000, commented in his speech on the low cost of administration of the local federation. He expressed surprise that only seven per cent. of the money contributed to the Jewish charities is devoted to costs of administration. The New York visitor, an accepted authority in his field, observed also that the philanthropies of the community must be supported invariably by the rich few and not by the masses.

Jews are at one on the question of charity, the guest of honour remarked, pointing out that religious views and national feelings do not guide the philanthropic impulse of the Jew. He appealed to the community to attempt to visualize the thousands of beneficiaries of the Federation, as if passing in procession before them, their pitiful hands outstretched towards the more fortunate members of the population of the city.

Harry Rother,
Past Chairman of the Business Men's Council and one of the Control Chairmen during this year's Drive.

Allan Bronfman, chairman of the executive committee of the Federation, delivered a stirring address, asking his hearers to "Let your standard of living set your standard of giving."

Dr. Lowenstein was introduced to the large audience by Michael Hirsch, past-president, and the vote of thanks was tendered by A. Z. Cohen.

Among those present at the head table with the chairman, Isaachar Greenberg, chairman of the Business Men's Council, directing the campaign, were the following: Joseph Levinson, president of the Federation, and Mrs. Levinson, Dr. Solomon Lowenstein, Michael Hirsch and Mrs. Hirsch, Michael Morris and Mrs. Morris, Leon Fischel, Clarence Michaels and Mrs. Michaels, J. P. Levee and Mrs. Levee, Harry Rother and Mrs. Rother, Allan Bronfman and Mrs. Bronfman, Maxwell Goldstein, K.C., and Mrs. Goldstein, A. Z. Levinoff and Mrs. Levinoff.

M. Goldenberg,
Chairman, Retail Clothing Division.

Report luncheons were held at the Mount Royal Hotel, November 27, 28, 29 and 30. The programme consisted of a series of intimate talks by the institutional workers on their work. Tuesday, first vice-chairman's day, Clarence Michaels presided; Wednesday, second vice-chairman's day, J. P. Levee presided; Thursday, past-chairman's day, Harry Rother presided, and Friday, past chairman's day, Leon H. Fischel presided.

Joseph Cohen entertained at a luncheon at the Mount Royal Hotel, Sunday, November 25, for his division of the federation campaign. Allan Bronfman, Isaachar Greenberg, and Joseph Cohen spoke.

Renovations of the house to suit the purposes of the school are now being completed and registration of pupils commences Monday, December 3, at the school house. The building is being equipped with modern school furniture and is being decorated. The elementary Jewish People's Schools curriculum includes Hebrew and Jewish Studies, and a Hebrew Jewish Kindergarten which the schools have been operating for eleven years. S. Wiseman will be supervisor.

OVER SIXTY YEARS' PUBLIC SERVICE

The slogan of King's Express is "the service that has no comparison," and taking into consideration the fact that it is by far the oldest operating express company in the city of Montreal, and that service has been its watchword since its establishment, the King's Express can fairly lay claim to its slogan. The efficiency of the King's Express in keeping pace with the manychanges and advances which have taken place in such a rapidly growing community like Montreal is due, in no small measure, to the able management of John O'Donnell, "the man who keeps his word." This is tested to the limit at moving time, when people's nerves are on edge as to whether or not the moving van is going to be on time. The King's Express trucks are always on time. John O'Donnell sees to that. It is this characteristic, together with his never-failing courtesy that have made Mr. O'Donnell and his trucks so popular in every part of the city and district of Montreal.

It is sixty-one years since the King's Express was established, when the automobile was not known, and local transportation was carried on by the means of horses. The King's Express was established with a single horse conveyance. To-day the company has at the command of its customers a large fleet of the most up-to-date auto trucks, vans and cars, as well as many horse conveyances. And to meet the ever-increasing demand the company is continually adding new trucks to its service. No job is too large or too small for King's Express. It handles anything that requires moving from one part of the city to another; in addition, the King's Express will take contracts to move anything to any part of Canada or the United States.

The King's Express has recently acquired a new storage warehouse on Dalhousie Street which is one of the finest as regards modernity, space and protection.

MOSES GELBER

Last Monday the leading Jews of Toronto paid honour to Moses Gelber for his fine communal leadership. I, too, wish to add my appreciation for the man, "Uncle Moshe" as he is best known, won a corner in my heart when we met for the first time at the thirteenth Zionist Congress in Carlsbad. From that day on our friendship flowered forth. What I like best about the man is his "chassidik" outlook upon life. Though many, many years in Canada, he has not forgotten the charm, romance and beauty of pietistic Galician Jewish life. Other Jews who come "west" pretend to be not themselves. They seem to forget the old life. They like to play the part of the "goy." Especially if wealth has come to them—they certainly wax fat and kick aside the traditional Jewish life. Not so is it in the case of this man. When he came into the possession of material goods, he dedicated same not only to Jewish charity but also to Jewish culture. The Talmud Torahs of Toronto owe much to Moshe Gelber. Congratulations to the Jews of Toronto who honoured him. In honouring Gelber they have honoured themselves.

THE STANDARDS OF LIVING AND GIVING

"Let the standard of your living be the standard of your giving"—such was the slogan Dr. Lowenstein brought to the opening of the Federation Campaign meeting. I like this slogan and I do wonder how many do give in accordance with their "living." The majority of us in all honesty give but the crumbs! In spite of organized philanthropy with all its pomp, speeches and noise, I believe our grandparents in their good old-fashioned way gave as much and often more than most of us do to-day. They certainly gave in accordance with their standard of living. The only Jew in the ghetto who did not give was the poorest Jew and he had no one to give to. And this thing of "giving" does not apply to our "poor" alone. What about the standard of giving to our cultural institutions? Is it in accordance with our dignity and present living? Shame, thrice shame, upon American Israel, whose Yeshibos, seminaries and colleges go begging. What does the average Jew give to his Shul and to his Temple? Why, many lose in one night at the card table more than they will give to a "shul" throughout their days upon this earth. In all sincerity is our standard of giving in accordance with our living?

THE BOOK THE JEWS DO NOT KNOW

How often have I heard Jews boast that "we" gave the Bible to the world! Yes, we gave it—away to the goyim. How many Jews to-day really, really know this book of books? How many find time to study it in accordance with the latest methods of biblical science? For many, a vast majority, it is a closed book. Why? The people of the sacred book have become the people of the check book.

FROM MY DIARY

Odessa: No longer the centre of Jewish culture—its leading synagogue is now a club for the workers. We are taken to the village of "the wild children" these victims of the revolution and famine, who are fatherless and motherless. There are two thousand children here, forty per cent. of which is Jewish. A lad of ten spoke to me and in good Yiddish asks "You come from America? Why did you 'murder' the prophets Sacco and Vanzetti?" Poor little ones, they are taught by the Soviets that civilization began with the Revolution of 1917, and that we in the western hemisphere are "barbarians"..... These "Yiddish kinder" will not grow up Jews. No, they will be communists—Russians. The question of the lad indicates the type of [illegible]

"Sometimes when people censure me,
I will claim without remorse
That for what it cost me to be free
I might have had an anchor."

Since Julius Rosenwald, of Chicago, gave five millions of dollars to Jewish colonization in Russia, the movement can no longer be called of semi-philanthropic character, considering subsequent developments. Another five millions in large single contributions have been given by wealthy Jews, and to match this whole amount the Russian Government has agreed to give another ten millions of dollars and to furnish as land valued at twenty millions the last available rich stretch in European Russia. The extension of Jewish colonization in Russia goes on now on a firm business foundation out of the realm of charity given on behalf of poor Jews seeking new opportunities and barred from this country.

It is interesting to read of what the former trader in Russia is doing now settled in the Ukraine, say, as a farmer. According to a table of figures made public recently by the Soviet Government, there are over 165,000 Jews now farmers. In 1913 there were only 52,758, old colonists, the descendants of Jews permitted to settle on the soil by the last two czars. The enormous increase (over 200 per cent.), in the number of Jews on the land is due in part to the founding of the Ozet and Comzet, two Jewish organizations put in charge of settling on the land the Jewish population of Russia. The Agrojoint and the newly-organized American Society for Jewish Land Settlement Work in Russia, working with the Soviet Government, propose to place 25,000 families on farms. Something of what life will be like for them can be gathered from an article by Louis Fischer which appeared in the April issue of the Menorah Journal.

The Jewish colonies in White Russia, says the writer, vary in size from forty to over 100 families. The villages are built on two long parallel unpaved streets and have one or two wells for the only water supply. The houses are made of clay formed into blocks with straw and kneaded by foot. They have at least two rooms plus a kitchen with stove and some have only earth for floors. Kerosene lamps are used and the furniture consists of incongruous remnants saved from the old ghetto. There are often pictures of the man and wife of the house as they were in the city when they lived under the old system and wore cutaway coat and Sabbath dress in great contrast to the ragged clothes they wear as farmer and wife. The houses have small stables and poultry pens, sometimes a wooden fence within which stand the farm implements. Spaces between houses are often truck gardens or vineyards. Public buildings constructed by the Agrojoint include school, bathhouse, co-operative bank and consumers' store, all of grey stone.

There are sometimes sixteen colonies within a diameter of ten miles. At first they are called by numbers and then named. Names of the colonies never recall the bitter past life of misery and blood. The settlers, who live there, are people of frayed nerves and many are weakened, stunted and deformed due to starvation and disease. They have no good reason to name a colony after some horrible other place. Among the names are Sholom Aleichem, Fraileben, Kadimo (Forward), Bethlehem, Novaya, Zarya (New Dawn), Novi Trud (New Labour) and the like. They reveal a great deal of the will of the Jew to fight through, to persist hopefully.

The cost of colonization per family unit is about $1,100, according to the Ica whose work is the most scientific. In Palestine, the writer says, it is about $5,000. There the land costs money. In Russia it is given by the Government. At the end of a three or four-year period the settler is expected to be independent and to begin paying back loans. The Agrojoint heretofore has attempted to meet the contingency of crop failure by introducing vine culture, poultry raising and so on. With the extension of the work under the Julius Rosenwald plan there should be an increase in the prosperity already visible in Krivoi Rog and the Crimea where Jewish peasants are beginning to think of the comforts of life instead of the bare necessities. It is most cheering to Jews in this country to know from reliable sources that the Jewish farmer is building firmly and soundly and that in time a cultural life may be expected to develop to make him feel at home rooted on the soil.

Social Life in 1906—
Do You Remember?—

Mrs. Isaac Friedman, of Montreal, had as her guest Miss I. Goldstein, of Toronto. Miss Isaacs, of St. John, N.B., was visiting Mrs. S. Fischel, Grosvenor Avenue. Mrs. Isaac Friedman gave a military euchre for her. Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Wener and Mr. and Mrs. Charles Rubin were chaperones at a euchre and dance given by the Progress Club at Westmount Hall. In King's Hall the marriage took place of Miss Bessie Erdrich, daughter of O. Erdrich, to Samuel M. Holofcener, of Ottawa. The ceremony was performed by Rev. M. De Sola, Dr. Abramowitz and Rev. S. Goldstein. Three hundred guests witnessed the ceremony and attended the banquet. The bride wore white lace over taffeta and chiffon with pearl trimmings and carried a shower bouquet of white roses and lilies-of-the-valley. The maid of honour, Miss Beccie Holstein, was in pale blue voile, carried pink roses. Dr. Norman Viner was best man. Mrs. O. Erdrich, mother of the bride, was gowned in black lace over taffeta and black chiffon. Mrs. Holofcener, mother of the groom, wore black lace. The couple left for the Eastern States and later to live in Ottawa. The bride's going-away costume was of black velvet. The groom's gift to her was a diamond pendant; to the maid of honour a pearl brooch and to the best man gold cuff links. Floor committee for the Hebrew Young Ladies' Sewing Circle was H. Hart, M. Albert and George Goldstein. S. S. Vineberg, Jr., left for Chicago. Miss Rose Vineberg left for the West. Mrs. Goldstein, of Cornwall, was in town. Mr. and Mrs. Herman Singer and daughter left for New York and Philadelphia. Miss Anna Wolfe, of Ottawa, visited Miss Rose Blumenthal. Mrs. Isaac Hyman, Elm Avenue, sustained a fracture of the arm. The engagement was announced of Miss Rebecca Hart, second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Hart, to Adolph Provaler, of Sudbury, Ont. Dr. Solomon Schechter, of the Jewish Theological Seminary, New York, was the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Lazarus Cohen. A. M. Vineberg went to Hot Springs, Arkansas. Officers of the Ottawa Ladies' Benevolent Society were Mrs. A. Rosenthal, president, for the eighth year; Mrs. Kert, first vice-president; Mrs. Max Wolfe, third; Mrs. S. Ryan, second; secretary, Mrs. Sam Myers; recording secretary, Miss B. Vineberg; treasurer, Mrs. A. Freiman; investigating committee, Mrs. Kert and Mrs. Lapine.

Brandeis Celebrates Another Birthday

By GEORGE JOEL

"By ancestry a Galician Jew, by birth a Kentuckian, by residence a Bostonian, by choice a volunteer attorney-general for the public interests, by instinct a fighter for a principle,"—that is how Louis D. Brandeis was pictured at the time of his elevation to the Supreme Court of the United States.

On November 13, 1928, Justice Louis D. Brandeis was seventy-two years old. As he sits on the bench of the Supreme Court his grey hair, always tousled, is noticeably greyer, but his piercing grey eyes retain their fire and he is still fighting the people's battle.

Louis D. Brandeis has been a fighter all his life. Most men fight over material things, but he battled for the interpretation of words—words such as democracy, social justice, freedom and equality. In Louisville, Ky., where he was born, he remembers the struggle of his father who was an Abolitionist, with his slave-owning neighbours. When he was sent to Anne Realschule in Dresden, Saxony, to study, he fought for the right to be free of what he believed were unjust rules curtailing the students' activities. At the Harvard Law School he found peace for a time,

Rhoda, age seven, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. B. Ramstein, 184 Lauder Avenue, Toronto, coming home from school, said: "Mother, one of the boys in our room passed into Miss Black's room." Sonya, age four, said: "Mother, isn't it funny all the teachers in Rhoda's school are coloured!"

CELEBRATES ANOTHER BIRTHDAY

and was graduated with the highest scholastic honours ever bestowed upon a student.

This peace was short-lived, for he soon formed a law partnership with Samuel Warren in Boston, and from 1879 until 1916 he was constantly engaged in highly controversial litigation. His first fight for the public's interests was waged against the gas companies of Boston. A young lawyer, fresh from law school, he worsted some of the legal lights of the city. The next few years found him actively participating in legal fights against other public utility corporations.

In 1907 his big chance came when he was invited to defend the Oregon law limiting the working hours of women before the Supreme Court of the United States. His brief of 605 pages which he submitted to the Court contained only four pages of strictly legal argument. The remaining pages were filled with a plea for a new interpretation of the law. By discussing medicine, economics, and sociology, Mr. Brandeis showed the court that social problems could not be decided solely on the precedent of law. His unorthodox presentation of the case shocked the court, but they could not deny the soundness of his arguments and decided in his favour.

This victory gave him a national reputation, and he was soon deluged with pleas to enter cases where questions of social importance were involved. Mr. Brandeis took advantage of the invitations and engaged in a long series of suits, in all of which he was on the side of the people. His opportunity was at hand to demand huge fees yet he turned down cases where the fee was his for the naming and fought the battle of the people for nothing. His unselfish efforts earned for him the sobriquet—"The People's Lawyer."

Mr. Brandeis was the first "trust buster" who did more than wave an angry fist at the powerful corporations. He fought them with facts and cold undeniable figures. He never made a statement that he could not back up. When he was engaged in proving that the railroads did not need a higher fare and freight rate, he stated that the companies were wasting a million dollars a day, and he could show them how to save it. His statement was greeted with jeers and he was accused of trying to make the "front page." He was invited to prove his assertions, and did so—to the amazement of the challengers. He proved that the railroads were inefficiently run and mismanaged. By pointing out how to eliminate waste he showed the way to the savings. The railroads did not get the raise in rates, and he was not thanked for his troubles. To this day the mere mention of his name will ruffle the composure of many a high railroad official.

On another occasion he said that American industry was built on failure. A hue and cry went up. Anything he said was galling to the financial leaders of the country. This time he laughed, and pointed out that all he meant was that the great industries did not arise until many men had failed, and from such failures men learned to succeed.

The fiercest fight in Louis D. Brandeis's life was waged without any help from him. It occurred when President Wilson placed his name before the Senate to fill a vacancy on the Supreme Court bench. At first a gasp of astonishment swept the country; then the enemies that Mr. Brandeis had accumulated in a generation of fighting massed and determined to block the appointment. All manner of charges were made against him, ranging from unethical conduct as a lawyer to downright dishonesty. Even some of those who were not his avowed enemies protested. It was thought that his liberal tendencies would colour his decisions on the bench. William Howard Taft, now a fellow member on the bench with Mr. Brandeis, came from New Haven to make his protest in person. Through all the shouting and fighting Mr. Brandeis waited and did nothing. The Senate dallied around a few months and then whitewashed Mr. Brandeis of all wrong-doings and voted for his confirmation. He took his place on the bench in 1916.

Since his elevation to the bench Justice Brandeis has confirmed the worst fears of those who said he would be a liberal. He still says "instead of amending the Constitution I would amend man's economic and social ideas." He asks the question, "Can this contradiction, our grand political liberty and this industrial slavery, long co-exist?" He does more than just wonder. He has written a set of dissenting opinions which set forth his ideas of social justice. His has been a liberal spirit. He dissented from the conviction of Benjamin Gitlow, the radical; the opinion upholding wire-tapping; the Espionage Law, the Criminal Anarchy Law, and the open shop policy. He fought for the constitutionality of the Child Labour Amendment. He is liberal in view of the power of Congress, but conservative in his views of the power of the Supreme Court.

Despite the many fights that Justice Brandeis has carried on since his admission to the bar, he is a man who loves peace. He is a good story teller with a ready wit and infectious laugh that brightens up his otherwise sad countenance. His intellectual pleasures are the law, but he is an excellent student of the Greek classics and the history of the middle ages. His conversation is constantly illuminated with quotations from the Greek poets, and is sometimes almost Homeric in spirit; yet he is wideawake to the present and is well informed on the things of the day.

As a boy in Kentucky he learned to love thoroughbred horses and to this day is a confirmed equestrian. He has little use for the automobile, and his slight figure mounted on a horse is a familiar sight around Washington. Although he spends a great deal of his time at the law, he always manages to find time to get some daily exercise. If the weather is not fit for riding, he indulges in long walks.

He sums up his philosophy of life by saying: "Behind every argument is some one's ignorance. Rediscover the foundation of truth and the purpose and causes of dispute immediately disappear."

When he entered the law he set a standard for professional conduct that could be adopted by any lawyer without arguing with his conscience. The young Brandeis said: "Law is an occupation that is pursued largely for others and not merely for one's own self; law is an occupation in which the amount of financial return is not the accepted measure of success." Louis Brandeis has followed these two rules closely throughout his career and it doesn't seem as though he is harmed very much in so doing.

It Came to Pass That——

This CANADIAN JEWISH REVIEW feature must prove of absorbing interest to all its readers, especially the young folks. It is a history of the Jewish people through centuries recorded by days. Buy a loose-leaf note book, clip this account and paste it in. If you do this every week, in time you will possess a hand-book of value. The historian is Dr. Cecil Roth, of London, England, fellow of the Royal Historical Society, author and essayist.

NOVEMBER 30TH

Brief of Honorius IV to English Church, 1280. It was the sixty-fifth anniversary of the promulgation of the Papal Bull putting into effect the decisions with regard to the Jews of the Fourth Lateran Council (November 30th, 1215), the principles of which the Pope now reaffirmed in a letter directed to the Archbishops of Canterbury and of York. He pointed out the evil effects of free intercourse between Jews and Christians, the pernicious consequences of their study of the Talmud, their endeavours to entice converts back into Judaism, and their continual infringement of the Canon laws directed against them; and he called for measures to put a stop to this improper state of affairs. His communication was taken into consideration at the Synod of Exeter in the following year, which reinforced all of the ancient canonical strictures against the Jews. They were forbidden to employ Christian domestics, to hold public office, to feast with Christians, or to attend them in their quality of physicians, to build new synagogues, to venture into churches, to leave their houses at Eastertide, to neglect the wearing of the Jewish badge or to withhold the payment of tithes. Thus the state of mind which led up to the expulsion of 1290 was prepared.

DECEMBER 1ST

Deliverance at Jerusalem, 1626. The community of the Holy City had increased in numbers by reason of the pious pilgrims who flowed thither from every corner of the Jewish world, and had become known once more as a centre of learning. In 1625, Mohammed Ibn Farukh was created governor. The taxes which he levied on the inhabitants were so onerous that all who could fled from the city, with hardly sufficient clothing left them to cover themselves. Ibn Farukh's replacement while he went on pilgrimage by his brother-in-law, Ottoman Agha, brought small relief, the latter being responsible for the imprisonment of the leaders of the community, including the famous scholars Isaiah Hurwitz and Moses Cordovero, the mystic. After a short time, Ibn Farukh returned, and conducted himself more mercilessly even than before. When complaint was made to the Vali of Damascus, it led to no immediate result beyond the imprisonment and torture of those responsible. The Cadi sent to Jerusalem to observe ultimately joined in the persecution, extorting money by a threat to turn one of the synagogues into a mill. When, in 1626, Ibn Farukh was deposed, a sigh of relief went up from the community of the Holy City, which observed that as a day of thanksgiving. The remaining Rabbis described their tribulations in an historical work, Horbot Jetusalem, which was distributed to invite the compassion and succour of their brethren in other lands.

DECEMBER 2ND

Expulsion from Little Russia, 1742. The Empress Elizabeth, daughter of Peter the Great, renewed and carried to an extreme the anti-Jewish policy which had been incepted by her mother, Catherine I. In the case of the expulsion here under consideration, she could give no reason excepting that "no fruit may be expected from haters of Christ's name other than extreme injury to our faithful subjects." The Cossacks of the region, and the merchants of Riga, were indignant at the measure; and the Senate recommended a more liberal treatment of the Jews, in view of the loss that would otherwise result to the country and to the Imperial treasury. Elizabeth spurned the report, writing on the margin, "I will not derive any profit from the enemies of Christ." Her death at a comparatively early age, in 1762, might perhaps have been averted had she not dismissed her able Court Physician, Antonio Ribeiro Sanchez, on discovering that he was of Jewish origin.

DECEMBER 3RD

Emancipation in Wurtemberg, 1861; and in Saxony, 1868. These marked successive stages in the last phase of the battle for Jewish equality in Germany, which began in Hesse in 1833, reached its climax with Prussia in 1848, and was finally embodied in the constitution of the North German Federation on July 3rd, 1869.

DECEMBER 4TH

Whitehall Conference opens, 1655. At last, Menasseh ben Israel's endeavours to procure the readmission of the Jews to England had borne some tangible result; for the Council of State invited a certain number of well-known lawyers, statesmen and divines to meet "neare the Council Chambers in Whitehall" to discuss the question. Cromwell himself presided, and put forward two leading questions for decision—firstly, whether it was lawful to receive the Jews; and, secondly, if it were lawful, upon what terms it was meet to receive them. The Conference met on four occasions—December 4th, 7th, 12th and 18th, 1655. Legal opinion was unanimous in the opinion that "there was no law which forbad the Jews' return into England." Opposition, however, was still rife. The clerical members showed themselves fiercely intolerant; the merchants professed that they feared competition; and even the most favourable would only consent to readmission under the severest restrictions. In despair, the liberal-minded Lord Protector broke up the Conference, after a fiery speech, on December 18th. It had not however been in vain, since it had decided that the readmission of the Jews was fully legal; and Cromwell began to "connive" at the re-settlement which he was unable to obtain by strictly constitutional methods. Thus it came about that the modern Jewish community in England grew up entirely free from such galling restrictions as obtained almost universally on the continent.

DECEMBER 5TH

Edict of Expulsion from Portugal, 1496. After the banishment exile from Spain four years previous, the smaller country had been the obvious haven of refuge, and a majority, perhaps, of the fugitives had directed their footsteps thither. Manuel "the Great," had shown himself on his accession in 1495 most benevolent, ameliorating the condition of the exiles and refusing even a gift which was offered to him in testimony of their gratitude. Political considerations however changed all of this. In the hopes of uniting the whole of the peninsula under his sceptre, Manuel desired to marry the Infanta Isabella of Spain. Her parents refused to consent to the match unless he followed their example by expelling the Jews from his dominions. The Council of State reported on the proposal most unfavourably. Manuel wavered; but he was at length decided by the Infanta herself, who declared that she would not enter Portugal until the country was cleansed of infidelity. On November 30th, 1496, the royal marriage treaty was signed. Four days later, the King issued an edict directing that all Jews should leave the country within eleven months, before the end of October, 1497. The tale of the horrors which ensued forms one of the most agonizing pages in all the long history of Jewish martyrdom.

DECEMBER 6TH

Birth of David Friedlander, 1750. He was the social leader in that revolution in the position of German Jewry which his master and friend, Moses Mendelssohn, had inspired. As son-in-law of Daniel Itzig, the wealthy banker, he was free from material preoccupations, and was given a position of some importance in the upper circles of Berlin. As a writer, he left behind him a number of literary and apologetical works; and he was co-founder with his brother-in-law, Isaac Daniel Itzig, of the first Jewish free-school in Berlin in 1780. But his policy was on the whole frankly assimilatory, being concerned principally with facilitating the entry of wealthy Jews like himself into Berlin society. Thus he was responsible for radical suggestions for the reform of Judaism which would have reduced it to a mere colourless ethical scheme; and he even professed his willingness to accept Christianity if he were not expected to believe in the divinity of Jesus and might evade certain ceremonies. His career, down to his death on December 25th, 1834, is a typical illustration of the consequences of the teaching of Moses Mendelssohn.

PERMANENT WAVE

The new Croquignole Wind of the Realistic Process of permanent waving is the real natural process of waving hair.

Over thirty years ago one of the first Permanent Wavers gave as his opinion that this was really the process that would be the greatest success.

The New Croquignole Wind

Mr. Pember, the father of permanent waving in Canada, was the first to employ this natural croquignole wind in Canada. Curling from the ends instead of from the roots. This process makes a beautiful wave without finger waving. A Permanent wave comparable to any natural wave.

City Dairy Milk
makes boys Grow Strong!

Active youngsters need plenty of pure, clean, RICH milk. "A quart a day is just right," says Dr. Hastings. And the cost of a quart of milk is small pay for robust health. And in most places where milk is served to boys and girls "for health's sake" you will find City Dairy milk.

Of course there are indifferent people, but even they finally take advantage of this excellent milk — pure, clean, RICH always. Give the children plenty. Phone Ki. 6151 for delivery.

NORTHERN ONTARIO CANADA

Northern Ontario, now open for settlement at fifty cents per acre, contains millions of acres of the finest agricultural land in the world. Its resources in lumber, minerals, water, power, fish, game and scenery are immense. The land calls for men to cultivate it, and in return will give health, comfort and prosperity.

What settlers say of the soil, climate farming and forest life, is told in a most attractive booklet issued under the direction of the Honourable John S. Martin, Minister of Agriculture for Ontario. Full instructions in regards to acquiring a title to these rich agricultural lands are also given.

For free copies write: G. A. ELLIOTT, Director of Colonization, Parliament Buildings, Toronto, Ontario.

We all know that after the Allies fought and bled for three years to hold the Germans at bay, the Americans appeared on the scene and won the war in one year.

The non-Zionists of the United States are now helping the Jews to win Palestine by offering words of encouragement and attending send-off banquets in honour of Dr. Weizmann.

At the end of 1929, or in the early part of 1930, they may actually raise some money and then they will clinch the conquest of Palestine.—A.B.B.

Rabbi Isserman's Editorials

But this we do know: What he said was truth! What he said was in the interests of justice and fair play! And we are happy to see that the leader of a great party can rise above the game of petty politics to take up the cudgel for a large group of maligned, misunderstood and inarticulate citizenry. By such words Mr. Bennett rules himself out of the category of politicians, and takes his stand in the ranks of statesmen. A politician is interested only in his own immediate welfare. A statesman loves truth and justice and fair play more than glory and power.

What a contrast between the words of the Hon. R. B. Bennett, Anglo-Saxon and Nordic, and those of Lord Melchett, son of a German immigrant, and lover of Zion. Bennett, the Nordic, has the courage to reprimand this party, and Melchett, the Semite, encouraged that very tribalism which would have kept his father out of Great Britain.

B'NAI BRITH OPEN MEETING

B'nai Brith will be visited Monday, December 3, by Hon. Alfred M. Cohen, of Cincinnati, president of the Order in America, and Dr. Boris D. Bogen, general secretary of the Order, also of Cincinnati. They will speak on phases of the work in various parts of the world, notably the United States and Mexico, at a general open meeting in the Crystal Ballroom of the King Edward Hotel. Public invited.

Relative Hunting

By SHLOME BEN MAYER

Upon my peace and comfort descended Phil and John, fresh from America, and demanding to be shown the sights. For five days we dashed about, from the Museum to Westminster Abbey, from Dr. Johnson's house in Gough Square to the Peter Pan statue in Kensington Gardens, from the Tower to Hampstead Heath.

Sunday morning came and I dawdled in bed. Everything was shut up and I would be able to get some much needed rest. But it was not be be. Phil and John burst into my room and demanded to be taken somewhere. I told them that there was no place to go and nothing to see. But Phil was not to be thwarted so easily.

"Listen," he said, "when my father was here in London twenty-five years ago, he visited a cousin of his. He has never communicated with him since, but he still remembers the address, and, upon my leaving New York, he asked me to look him up. Come on, get dressed. Now is the time."

I made a brave effort to resist. "What's the address?" I asked him. He told me. I had never heard of the street.

"But," said Phil, "I do know that it is in the East End of London somewhere near Commercial Road. Take us there and we'll be able to find it."

I still demurred and protested but there is no arguing with Phil. He will have his way.

We took the 'bus to Aldgate and had breakfast on Whitechapel Road. The waiter became very friendly and chatted with us in Yiddish. He addressed a remark to John. We told him that John was not Jewish. But he would not believe us. "He has such an intelligent face," he said.

We finished our breakfast and went out into Commercial Road. We stopped every man we met and asked after the street we wanted. But nobody had ever heard of it. After half-an-hour's parading up and down Commercial Road, we were ready to give up. We figured that Phil's father had given him the wrong address. Not that we blamed Phil's father. Twenty-five years was a long time and anybody would have forgotten. So John and I tried to comfort Phil but he remained gloomy and a trifle abstracted. We were just about to start for home when Phil came out of his abstraction.

"I remember," he burst out, "my father said that the street started at Brick Lane. Let's find Brick Lane."

Wearily and hopelessly I asked how we were to find Brick Lane. But Phil had an answer for everything. "Let's ask," he suggested. Marvelous mind, Phil's.

I was told that it was around the corner. We started at one end of the street and went all the way to the other end. We came back. We criss-crossed from side to side. There was no such street as Phil had named to me. We stopped at a corner and asked a typically Cockney youth the whereabouts of the street. He pondered for a moment or two. "No," he shook his head, "never 'eard of it." As we stood looking at each other, undecided, an old man approached our Cockney youth and said to him in Yiddish, "What do they want?"

He told him. Phil turned to him and explained further. "This is the street," said the old man. "The name of it was changed about fifteen years ago." He pointed up the cross-street at which we were standing.

Young People's Society meets Wednesday, December 5, at 8.30 p.m. Programme: Jack Spector will speak on "Canada and the British Commonwealth of Nations"; Lottie Rabinovitch, recitations. Dancing.

Phil thanked him. I, too, thanked him—not very heartily, I fear. We walked up the street and stopped at No. 9. A young man answered the bell.

"Does Mr. Fleischman live here?" Phil asked him.

The young man shook his head.

"Nobody by that name lives here. What number did you want?"

"No. 9," answered Phil. "I know that Mr. Fleischman lived here twenty-five years ago, before the name of the street was changed. Perhaps you could tell me where he lives now."

"No," said the young man, "you'll have to try the other end of the street. When the name of the street was changed, the numbers were changed also. This is the new No. 9.

We set out for the other end of the street. We located what has been No. 9 and found that the old house had been torn down. A factory stood in its place. But nothing could stop us now. The trail was becoming hot. Across the street was a synagogue. And over to the synagogue we went. "For," said Phil, "he was a very pious man. There must surely be some old members of the congregation who would remember him."

We tried the door of the synagogue and found it locked. A grizzled old man crossed from the other side of the street and asked us if he could help us.

We explained our mission to him. "No," he said, "I have never heard of him. But—there is a grocer on the corner who has been on that spot for forty years. He would know." We followed him into the grocer's shop.

The grocer was a patriarchal-looking individual with a long white beard.

"Fleischman—mmmm."

"Don't you know him?" Phil asked.

"Oh, yes, I know him. I know him well. But I'm trying to remember where he lives. M-m-m-m." He plucked his beard thoughtfully. "Wait—my wife will know." He sent the young boy who was helping him tend shop to fetch his wife.

She came, a withered old lady with wisps of white hair showing below her "sheitel." No she didn't know where Fleischman lived now. "But wait, Frume will know. What a memory she has. She remembers everything. David," she turned to the boy who had brought her, "run over and get Frume."

We settled down in the store and waited, Phil talking to the old people while I explained to John what was happening. He, poor fellow, was in the dark and completely dazed by the flood of Yiddish all about him.

It took about ten minutes for David to return with Frume. She was, if anything, older than the grocer or his wife. We explained to her. She knew. "Fleischman, yes. A fine Jew. A good Jew. A pious Jew." She sighed. "There are not many like him, may he live long. He lives with his daughter, God bless her. A good Jewish daughter. Come with me. I'll show you."

We left the grocer's shop in a body. First went Phil, busily chatting away with Frume, having a wonderful time. I followed, holding conversation with the grocer and his wife. John and the old fellow who had met us at the synagogue brought up the rear. Poor John. The old man was talking away and John listened carefully, occasionally grunting a response, trying to give the old man the impression that he understood everything that was being said. The boy, David, had been left behind to watch the shop.

We came to the house and knocked at the door. Again we went through our explanation, this time to a middle-aged lady. "Oh," she said, "you mean the Frieds. They moved out of here about four months ago. I don't remember the number but I know the house. Come, I'll take you there."

Eight strong we arrived at the home of Mrs. Fried. She opened the door and looked at us curiously. We all stepped back to let Phil speak.

"Mrs. Fried," he began, exactly as if he were cross-examining a witness in the chair, "is your father's name Fleischman?"

"Yes," she answered.

"Has he a cousin in New York by the name of Sheinberg?"

"Yes, of course. He hasn't heard from him in over twenty years. Do you know him?"

"I'm his son," said Phil. "My name is Phil Sheinberg."

"Oh!" she gasped. She grasped him by the hand and they looked at each other, undecided as to whether they ought to kiss or not. They decided not. "Come in. Won't father be happy to see you. He's in the synagogue now, Joe," she called into the house, "run over to the synagogue and get Grandpa. Come in, come in."

Phil turned to the people who had helped us and started to thank them. But Frume interrupted him.

"Pooh," she said, "what have you to thank us for? It was nothing. If one Jew can't help another, who will help him? May God bless you. Good-bye."

"Good-bye, good-bye," they all echoed as they went down the stairs. The three of us went inside.

Four hours later the three of us were back in my room. A fire burned in the grate, a bottle of wine stood on the table and we were lolling back, at our ease. Phil and I were radiant. John seemed puzzled and slightly humble. At last he spoke.

"Tell me," he said, "what was the idea? All those people were perfect strangers to you. They didn't know who and what you were. Am I right?"

We nodded.

"I," he went on, "have had to find people at some time or other. When I asked my way, people were polite enough and directed me. But they never went out of their way. They never troubled themselves. And you—you come to a strange neighbourhood. You know nobody and nobody knows you. And yet all these people went out of their way to help you and set you right. I'm quite sure they would have taken even more trouble than they did if necessary. What is there in it? Why should one Jew feel more for another Jew than, let us say, one Catholic feels for another Catholic?

I sat contemplating my glass of wine. "John," I asked, "did you ever hear the phrase 'Kol Yisroel Chavayrim'?"

"No," he said, "What does it mean?"

"All Jews are brothers," said Phil.—Sentinel.
